graduation thesis

Title	Strengthening rural livelihoods Using bamboo as a resource in Kathmandu Valley
Language	english
Supervisor	Luca Maria Francesco Fabris
Thesis Summary	How to use bamboo as a resource in Nepalese rural area? Nepal is one of the poorest countries in the world and its situation was worsened in 2015, after a huge earthquake destroyed several parts of the country. The countryside area has been the most affected by the cataclysm, with the highest number of victims. Researches estimated that most of the houses that collapsed were made by concrete or wood, while bamboo dwellings endured the damages. However, even if Nepal is quite abundant both in terms of bamboo quantity and species, this material was not commonly used in the construction field through the last decades. Nowadays, the industrialisation process encourages people to trust more in industrial materials such as concrete, steel or glass. This makes natural materials, including bamboo, lose their importance in the architectural field. The aim of the thesis is how to use this natural material in Nepalese rural area, where it is abundant, by providing a method easy to apply and make it a resource for rural livelihoods. In this way, villagers could learn to build without the need of skilled labours.

Social skills and competences Living and working with other people, in multicultural environments, in positions where communication is important and situations where teamwork is essential (e.g. Culture and sports), etc.	I've organised photography and art exhibitions with the help of friends. With the experience of Politecnico of Milan, where we've always used to work in groups, I've learnt the importance of working together with others. With Architetti senza frontiere I used to work with a beautiful team of architects and the people that we have met for our projects. In China we worked in a Community to save a small district from demolition with the professor of Tongji university. For last, the experience in France in the landscape studio, we used to work in large groups with different experts.
