3 TRACK RECORD IN CIRCULAR ECONOMY RESEARCH

Since 1984, Stahel has been active as business consultant in most European countries, the USA and Asian countries in the fields of:

- developing strategies, policies and tools to foster sustainable development (sustainable production and consumption issues) through sufficiency, efficiency and systems solutions,
- researching utilization-focused technologies such as the re-use, repair, reprocessing and technological upgrading of components, goods and systems, combining corporate strategies of technical and marketing nature with industrial design,
- risk management and the insurability of risks and their relevance for the shift from an industrial (or river) to a service (or lake) economy,
- regional economic development and job creation.

A consultant on the policies and strategies of a sustainable development to the European Commission in Brussels, he participated at its 'Futures 2010' project (on the panels 'natural resources and the environment', 'European technology map', 'financing the societal bills'), as well as on ETAN and STRATA projects on research policy, risk management and global climate change, and on the issue of sustainable and competitive production. He was an associate member of ESTO, the European Science and Technology Observatory.

He has worked as a consultant on strategic issues for:

- a number of large industrial companies (including BP, Castrol, CORUS and Cookson Plc in the UK; Eastman Kodak, Polaroid Corp., Thoro System Products/ICI Speciality Chemicals, Southern California Edison, Xerox and others in the USA, Fuji-Xerox in Japan, Grundfoss, Bosch, Siemens, Sika and Electrolux in Europe);
- small and medium sized enterprises in Germany, Austria, India and Japan;
- national and regional governments in Europe (UK House of Commons, London; Ministry of the Environment Baden-Württemberg, Stuttgart; Federal Ministry of Innovation and Technology, Vienna; Federal Ministry of Research and Education, Bonn, Germany; Ministère de la Recherche, Paris, Scottish Parliament),
- professional organisations (including the UK Design Council, the U.S. IDSA (Industrial Designer Society of America), the Austrian 'WIFI' (office of economic promotion), and CIDA, the Chinese Industrial Designer Association).

Stahel regularly lectures at universities and conferences in Europe, Asia and the USA on subjects ranging from the insurability of risks as the borderline between State and the economy, risk management and loss prevention to eco-design, waste prevention and strategies for a more sustainable development. Since 2020, this activity has increased but mostly in on-line events.

He was Manager of the IFG Forum 1992/93 (International Design Forum Ulm – the successor of the IHG Ulm) and its award programme on the theme of 'Common utilization versus singular consumption'.
